EDMONTON BULLETIN, MAY 10th 1894.

GAME PROTECTION IN THE NORTH.

A copy of the bill for the protection of game in the unorganized portions of the Territories, introduced in the Senate by Mr. Bowell, is to hand. It is remarkable in many respects but chiefly as an effort at not doing what the introducer of the bill knows, if he knows anything, can't be done. In some particulars it follows the provisions of the Northwest game law, but calmly ignores the vast difference between the conditions which prevail in the bulk of the unorganized territory from those which prevail in the organized territory to which the Northwest ordinance applies. In the latter the people as a rule shoot game for sport and not as a necessary part of their food. In the former game is the main food supply of the majority of the inhabitants. In the organized territory the proportion of game to population is comparatively small; in the unorganized parts the proportion of game to people is very large. There is therefore more necessity for allowing people to shoot in the unorganized portions and less necessity for protecting the game. So that the law which is worded the same for both parts of the Territories is in its application a widely different law. A law must be judged by the circumstances to which it is to apply as well as by its wording. The idea of establishing a close season for musk oxen, elk, moose, cariboo, deer, mountain sheep and goats, minks, fishers, martens, beavers, mink, rats, grouse, partridge, pheasants, prairie chickens, wild swans, wild ducks and wild geese, may be good enough as an idea. But unless it is intended that the idea shall be given effect, why should it have a place in legislation? Any person who will glance at the map of the Mackenzie basin, and note the number of trading posts contained, which trading posts are the only possible centres of authority, and as a matter of fact are the only places where anybody but Indians live, can see what the possibilities are for rendering this law effective. In the nature of things the provisions of the law will simply be ignored, not that game will be shot out of season simply because it is out of season, but game will be shot as the hunter may choose without regard to the provisions of the law, which he knows is generally disregarded because it cannot be generally enforced. At the same time it places a weapon in the hands of those in authority which may be used as a menace or an injury to individuals, without affecting the general slaughter of game in the slightest degree. It is a fair general proposition that if legislation cannot be given effect it should not be enacted, for under these circumstances its enactment can only lead to confusion.

If it is probable that some of the valuable species of animals or birds included in this game law are in danger of extinction or are being unduly reduced in numbers let adequate measures be taken for their protection, but it is nonsense to include swans and geese which in that region are well able to take care of themselves, in the same list and with the same protective provisions as, say, musk oxen, which might possibly be killed off in process of time, if it is intended to make the provisions of the ordinance effective. But the protection which only consists in the declaration of a close season is no protection at all in a country of such immense distances, of such an inaccessible nature throughout its greater part and such sparse population as the Mackenzie basin.

The provisions regarding wood buffalo differ materially from those regarding every other animal; and it is right that they should. The herds of wood buffalo have been so reduced that their total extinction is a matter of only a very few years, unless something is done. On its face the provision which declares that wood buffalo shall have a continuous close season until the 1,900 and which makes the having in possession of any part of a wood buffalo during that time an offence under the act, looks adequate; and it would be under some circumstances. It will certainly have some protective effect, inasmuch as it will lessen the present great inducement for destroying the wood buffalo. But the misfortune is that there still remains quite sufficient inducement to cause their destruction, which the provisions of the act do not affect owing to the impossibility of enforcing the full protective measure.

Although the Indian may not sell the meat, head or robe of the buffalo he certainly can use the meat and robe for his own purposes to very great advantage, which advantage he thoroughly realizes. It is not likely that hungry Indian who happens upon a buffalo one, two or three hundred miles from the nearest legal authority will hesitate about slaughtering the animal, even if it should ever come to his knowledge that some one whose right of control he does not recognize has said that he shall not do it; for it must be remembered that the Indians in the region where the wood buffalo is found have not been treated with by the government and thereby brought to recognize its authority. The fact of the matter is that the herds of wood buffalo are so far reduced in numbers that if the species is to be preserved from absolute extinction it must be by process of partial domestication. Animals for breeding purposes must be secured and kept under government protection and management. This can be done and would be effective. No other means is adequate. The most that the legislation proposed can possibly do is to postpone the date of total extinction for a year or two beyond the time when it would occur without it. The present bill places unnecessary and inconvenient restrictions upon traders and travellers without reasonable prospect of beneficial result.

The provisions of the bill do not apply to Indians except in so far as it relates to wood buffalo and musk oxen. Owing to the fact that the Indians in the region affected have not been treated with it cannot be enforced against them in these respects without danger of serious trouble, and in so far as it protects other kinds of game from the infinitesimally small white population of the region, it is ridiculously unnecessary. Its only redeeming feature is that it will practically be a dead letter.

Winnipeg wants a rate of 12½ cents per hundred pounds on wheat from that place to Port Arthur, that being the rate from St. Paul to Chicago.

Winnipeg Tribune on the lumber rates over the C.P.R.: Why will he go on spending hundreds of thousands of dollars developing lines to the south of us, to give the Yankees the benefit of cheap freight rates and magnificent service, while we in the west are left to sputter under exacting rates, and pull through the best way we can? Is it for this that we poured our millions in cash, and millions of acres of our best lands into the capacious maw of the company? Is it for this that Canada has pledged her national credit and piled up her national debt? If it is, then we are free to confess that a lamentable mess has been made of the whole business.

FORT SASKATCHEWAN, ALBERTA.

The new town hall will be completed this week.

Mr. Montgomery's large harness shop is getting ahead nicely.

Belcher, Dennis and Inglis avenues and a portion of Lang street are to be graded up shortly.

We are at last to have, what has been long wanted, a good hotel building. The foundation is laid, and by the end of this week the frame will be erected. It is to be two stories high, roofed with metal, and has a frontage of 45 feet. It has a central position, being the corner of Government street and Dennis avenue. Will be heated by hot air furnace and will be leased by well known hotel men Messrs. Lucien Vellat and Jno. L. Mellon, whose names should be a guarantee for the management. It is to be known as the Mansion house.

Grievous complaints keep coming in of the manner in which the old travelled trails to Victoria and Egg lake, and also Beaver lake, are being fenced in to the detriment of all travellers. The travel to these points is increasing daily, as they are the principal ones leading to nearly all the vacant homestead lands in Northern Alberta. It is a well-known fact that nearly all our road allowances strike the most impassable spots that can possibly be, not only here but in other portions of the Territories, and we are pleased to see such well known authorities as Commissioner Herchmer and Supt. Steele speak of this fact in the last annual report of the Northwest Mounted Police. Petitions have been sent in, and we trust that the government will take immediate action and have our main trails surveyed, as the present state of affairs is simply a set back to the whole country and is keeping prospective settlers from even trying to see the outlying country when they hear the reports of those who have travelled over the trails mentioned. We have no railway communication and the least that can be expected is passable wagon roads.

GENERAL NEWS.

The Nor-West speaking of Coxey's army says: It is a discreditable display in whatever light it may be regarded. It is discreditable to the newspapers that talked it into life. If Coxey had been let alone it is more probable that he and his army would never have got twenty miles from Massillon. It is discreditable to the people of the United States, who, by encouraging the newspapers, encouraged a demonstration of lawless idleness. It is discreditable to the politicians, who are so unscrupulous in their methods that they would not hesitate to take advantage of such a display of vagabondism to bring odium upon the administration; who would not scorn to employ bums, tramps and criminals as agencies to serve a party political purpose. The whole affair is disgraceful. If it were the spontaneous uprising of idle men seeking work we could have some sympathy with it. It is nothing more than a political game. The scum of the country has been gathered into masses, to serve as evidence of the unpopularity of the administration and its policy. This is done at the risk of violence and suffering, and with wicked indifference to the mischief that has been set afoot. It is hard to say what will be the end of it. Between 6,000 and 7,000 men, armed and subject to military discipline, are on the road to Washington, bearing their way. Some of them, perhaps all, will reach their destination, but it will only be to experience disappointment. What men naturally desperate and rendered more so by the circumstances which bring them together may do or refrain from doing it would not be safe to predict. But terminate as it may, the movement is a disgrace to American enlightenment and a singularly unhappy commentary on the boasted institutions of the country.

Winnipeg Tribune: The very positive and emphatic negative answer which President Van Horne gave to the rates committee of the Board of Trade, that under no consideration would the rates be reduced, makes it imperative that we must appeal to a higher court. If the company to which we have been appealing for months to do something in the way of lessening the burdens which are weighing our people down, positively declines to budge an inch, then we must appeal to the company's master—the parliament of Canada—and if that body will do nothing, then the case must be carried to the highest court in the land, viz., the people who elect the parliament. This is the only course now left open to us. If the company will not yield to reason, if it goes blindly forward, refusing to see that it is in its own interest to reduce the rates, then there is nothing left for us to do, but appeal to the company's master. The parliament of Canada is that master. It was the parliament of Canada that lavished our millions in land and treasure upon the company. It was the parliament of Canada that practically built the road with the people's money, and then handed it over to the company, enabling its promoters (?) to pocket their millions and then quietly drop out leaving the road in the hands of Messrs. Van Horne, Shaughnessy and others who know nothing of, and care less for, the obligations with which the enterprise was supposed to be clothed, when it was endowed with our vast and princely subsidies. Viewed from any standpoint you like, we say that it is the parliament of Canada that is to blame for the state of affairs that exists to-day, and the officers of the road having declined to budge an inch in the matter of granting relief, the people who are suffering have a right to turn to that parliament for relief and have a right to expect that such a relief shall be granted.

PUBLIC MEETING.

According to notice given by the mayor a public meeting was held in the council chamber last night to discuss and urge upon the government the appointment of a resident judge. Mayor McCauley was elected chairman. L. Cowie, secretary.

The mayor explained in a few words the purpose of the meeting.

N. D. Beck said that the Edmonton bar had petitioned two years ago for a resident judge. The petition had been endorsed by the Calgary bar, and evidently the Calgary bar had continued to move in the matter. It appeared to him that the present arrangement was chiefly a scheme for the aggrandizement of Calgary. At a meeting of the bar association, held in the afternoon, a resolution had been prepared, bearing on the question. There was no doubt that judge Rouleau had sufficient work in Calgary to keep him employed.

E. C. Emery read the following resolution:

Whereas representations have from time to time been made to the Dominion Government pointing out the great detriment and disadvantage which the people of the Edmonton district suffer through not having a judge of the supreme court of the Northwest Territories residing at Edmonton;

And whereas it has been reported that in consequence of such representations it is proposed to remove the judge residing at the town of McLeod to the city of Calgary as a remedy therefor:

And whereas in the opinion of this meeting such a change would not in any way sufficiently relieve the people of the Edmonton district from the disadvantage that now labor under through want of a resident judge;

And whereas in the opinion of this meeting the town of Edmonton and the surrounding district has for two years and upwards been entitled to a resident judge, and is now of such importance owing to the increase of population and consequent business resulting therefrom that it is necessary in the interests of this town and district that a judge be appointed to preside over a new and separate judicial district having the town of Edmonton for its seat;

Therefore be it resolved that a judge of the supreme court of the Northwest Territories ought to be appointed to reside at the town of Edmonton to preside over a new and separate judicial district to be composed of all that part of the present judicial district of Northern Alberta lying north of townships 34.

S. S. Taylor said that the question had been discussed at a meeting of the bar of the Territories in Regina in December last, when comparisons were made of the legal business in the several districts. From this comparison it appeared that Edmonton alone, not including the country from Wetaskiwin south, had very nearly as much legal business as Calgary, which was at the head of the list, five times as much as the Southern Alberta or Saskatchewan judicial districts, each of which had a resident judge, and considerably more than either East or West Assiniboina, each of which had a resident judge. This comparison was of actual court business and did not include writs of execution, garnishee or replevin, probate proceedings or chambers applications. This large amount of legal business meant large population and required improved facilities. The amount of agency fees paid to members of the Calgary bar in respect of this legal business was very large, and would astonish the clients who paid them if shown in the aggregate. Besides the extra cost of agency fees in Calgary was the disadvantage of having cases handled by agents instead of by the legal men originally employed, who were most interested and best informed. Besides this a large amount of work was held over from court to court, to the loss of litigants. The circumstances demanded the appointment of a resident judge.

E. C. Emery said that besides the work alluded to by Mr. Taylor there was frequently work in connection with the registry office which required the services of a resident judge and was unreasonably delayed by having to be handled by the judge in Calgary. He also pointed out that certain provisions of the Northwest ordinance regarding the collection of small debts were rendered practically useless here by there being no resident judge.

Jas. McDonald said we had too much law and too little justice. It was an injustice to have so much of our legal work done in Calgary. He moved the adoption of the resolution.

W. Johnstone Walker agreed with the terms of the resolution. Edmonton had become too important to be slighted as in the past. He seconded the resolution.

J. A. McDougall was surprised at the amount of law business done in Edmonton as stated by Mr. Taylor. He knew the legal fraternity were prosperous and now the reason was explained. The agency fees paid to Calgary lawyers were paid by Edmonton clients. The people should take an active part in securing their rights in this matter, and not neglect their own interests.

C. M. Woodward corroborated the statements made by Mr. Taylor as to the amount of law business done in Edmonton as compared with other places. Under present arrangements cases were stayed off from session to session of the court and justice was practically denied in many cases.

The discussion was continued at some length, a number of speakers taking part, and the resolution was finally carried unanimously.

The following resolutions were then passed, and the meeting adjourned:

Moved by N. D. Beck seconded by K. A. McLeod, that this meeting of the townspeople hereby request the council to offer the government the use of the council chamber for the holding of chambers and sittings of the court in the event of a resident judge being appointed for Edmonton, on such terms as to length of time and otherwise as the council and government may agree.

Moved by Jas. McDonald, seconded by F. Oliver, that copies of these resolutions be sent to the minister of justice, Messrs. Davis and Macdowell, M.P.s, Lieutenant-Governor Mackintosh, Hon. T. M. Daly, minister of interior, and C. A. Magrath, M.L.A. for Lethbridge, who is now in Ottawa.

F. H. BURNETT, veterinary surgeon, arrived on Monday's train with Police Commissioner Herchmer to inspect the horses of the detachment with a view of selling those that will serve and of purchasing others.

On Tuesday morning a little damp snow began to fall and continued until the afternoon when the weather cleared. The snow melted as it fell and gave the surface of the ground a good working, that had an immediate effect on the grass. The weather has been less windy since Tuesday but is not as yet settled.
